About us

South Gloucestershire Advice Services is a group of advice providers who can help with information and advice on life's most common problems – and some of the more unusual ones too.

Some of our partners deal mostly with welfare benefits and debt while others can give advice across a much wider field, or for a specific group of people.

Between us all, there's an advice session somewhere in South Gloucestershire every weekday, and you can also get advice by phone, email, and some partners offer webchat.

You can either choose the advice session nearest to you, or go to one offered by an organisation that specialises in your problem. If you think a different agency would be better placed to help you, just ask and we'll get in touch with them for you.

South Gloucestershire Council has funded this service as part of its strategy to build safer and more cohesive communities and to reduce financial exclusion. All our advice is free, independent and impartial.
